Allow other devices and apps to use your Personal Voice

If your Apple Account is using two-factor authentication, you can share the Personal Voice you created on one device with other devices that are signed in to iCloud with the same Apple Account. This also securely stores a copy of your voice in iCloud so that it can be retrieved if you later repair or replace your device. You can also allow other apps, such as augmented speech apps, to request to use your Personal Voice.

iPhone, iPad, Apple Watch, Apple Vision Pro

1. In the Settings app, tap Accessibility, then tap Personal Voice.

- You can also allow third-party apps, such as augmentative and alternative communication (AAC) apps, to request to use your personal voice. They can then use your Personal Voice to speak aloud through your device's speaker or during calls, but they can't capture speech from Personal Voice.

About Personal Voice and privacy

Personal Voice is designed with privacy and security in mind. Personal Voice is encrypted and stored securely on device, so that only you can access it with Face ID, Touch ID, or your device passcode or password. When you share your Personal Voice across devices, iCloud stores your Personal Voice using end-to-end encryption. You can use Personal Voice only to create a voice that sounds like you on device, using only your own voice, and only for your own personal, non-commercial use. Your Legacy Contact can't access your Personal Voice.
